KEEPING IT LOCAL

The University of Vermont Cancer Center directly benefits from support and awareness that is created by these events. Local efforts support ground breaking research that directly benefit patients and families in our community.

INVITATION

Please join us by becoming involved and educated about what you can do. Every effort is a step in the direction of giving hope and meaningful treatment to a friend, neighbor or loved one. We encourage you to join us and look forward to seeing you at the Rally Against Cancer games!

FROM THE SPONSOR

“As the Presenting Sponsor of the Rally Against Cancer games we acknowledge the deep impact that cancer has on our employees, clients, friends, family and larger community. We understand that to truly make an impact we must all be involved and that together our efforts will result in meaningful progress toward treatments and an eventual cure.”

A Lavender Ribbon brings awareness to All Cancers. This may acknowledge any of the cancers that do not have a specific awareness color, or it may be used to represent a variety of different cancers.

Why We Support UVM Cancer Center

The University of Vermont (UVM) Cancer Center, at the University of Vermont and the UVM Medical Center, is known to many for the exceptional cancer care it provides to patients. Behind that compassionate care is a strong research and education engine that fuels discovery and looks to advance the prevention and detection of cancer, as well as to improve the quality of life for cancer survivors and their families.

As one of fewer than 100 academic cancer centers in the United States, the UVM Cancer Center and its members are part of a national collaboration of experts rising to meet the challenges cancer presents on daily basis. The doctors, nurses, counselors, researchers, and advocates of the UVM Cancer Center are a team that are here for our community—working to stop cancer before it starts and to support those affected by cancer across the spectrum.

The following are research studies being conducted TODAY:

- Targeted disruption of cancer cell division
- Preventing the spread of breast cancer to other areas of the body
  - Finding better ways to detect prostate cancer
- Developing targeted therapies for hard-to-treat childhood leukemias
  - Developing new and better ways to predict cancer risk
- Making cutting-edge care available in our region through clinical trials
- Advancing local and national policies that protect individuals and communities from cancer risk

Support from the community has made so many of these advances possible. Thank you for joining in Rallying Against Cancer with Inspired Closets and UVM Athletics. Your participation galvanizes our community to be a part of that support.
